

Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, USA

Pratt Institute is a private university with its main campus in Brooklyn, New York. It has a satellite campus in Manhattan and an extension campus in Utica, New York at the Munson-Williams-Proctor Arts Institute. The school was founded in 1887 by American industrialist Charles Pratt. Pratt has been accredited by the Middle States Association of Colleges and Schools since 1950, and the film program has been registered since July 1972. Comprised of six schools, each of which is an umbrella for multiple fields of study (School of Architecture, School of Art, School of Design, School of Liberal Arts & Sciences, School of Information, and the School of Continuing and Professional Studies), the Institute is known in particular for its programs in architecture, graphic design, interior design, fashion, industrial design, and film/video. The curriculum at Pratt strives to blend theory and practice, and weaves creative studio work with critical reflection on social impact. It is a dynamic approach that challenges students to reach their full potential to think and to make, to lead and to collaborate, and evolve continually above all.

Pratt School of Art provides a rigorous, student-centered education that emphasizes risk-taking and exploration. We graduate diverse artists and professionals who use their expertise with insight, enriching culture and the world. Two major objectives guide every department:

- The first objective is an emphasis on professional skills development. The school's students gain the techniques, skills, methodology, and vocabulary required for success as productive artists, designers, and scholars.
- The second objective—imperative so that the professional expertise is not simply technical training—is the development of the critical judgment and historical perspective needed to become a problem solver. Art and design history, melded with studies in the liberal arts and sciences, provides the context for stimulating intellectual and creative inquiry.

The Film/Video program provides a foundation in nonfiction, fiction, experimental, and other time-based media practices. Our rigorous, project-based curriculum is centered around the creation of a sequence of films and videos that grow in complexity each semester, culminating in a year-long thesis project.

Each student is offered ample opportunity to grow and advance their conceptual, technical, and professional skills. They are encouraged to take creative risks, and to push the boundaries of conventional forms. They are introduced to a diverse canon of creators and works and are asked to investigate complex histories and contexts as they strive to become reflexive and conscientious artists.

We aim to foster a supportive and collaborative creative community in which differences are respected and celebrated. We value the personal perspectives that each student brings to the classroom, and our goal is to elevate that unique voice to the forefront of their artistic vision.

Rather than specializing and exclusively studying one aspect of film/video, our students all complete a sequence of courses that provides instruction in a wide variety of modalities and skills; with an eye to graduating students who are empowered to join the professional world with a well-rounded set of technical and creative skills at their disposal, a strong sense of their creative point of view, and an ability to collaborate on projects effectively with others. Students produce, on average, 140 minutes of film/video work within our 16 required core courses and 4 required elective courses. Upon completion of our program students are able to:

- Implement all phases of the filmmaking process at a professional level, including pre-production, production and post-production.
- Conceptualize a well-researched project with a distinct point of view.
- Demonstrate professional-level technical and aesthetic proficiency that intentionally supports the vision of the film or video.
- Responsibly and respectfully engage both independently and collaboratively with co-workers, community members, and all stakeholders.

The language of study is English and tuition fees for up to 18 credits in a semester is €54,600 plus €1,760 per credit in excess of 18 credits. The number of applicants to the Film/Video Major in 24/25 were 428 (M-195, F-233), and the total number of enrolled students in Film/Video in 24/25 was 223 (M-98, F-115, Gender non-conforming or other reply-10). Pratt's overall undergraduate enrollment in 24/25 was 3,686. Pratt's application consists of a portfolio submission, an essay, High School transcript and recommendation letters. Scores on language exams such as the TOEFL are required to be 92 or higher, and a GPA of 3.2 or higher is preferred for admission but may be conditional on the strength of other materials such as the application portfolio. Graduates must complete a total of 126 credits at the minimum, including all required courses for their major, and meet or exceed the minimum GPA requirements for graduation (2.0 for undergraduate students). In Film/Video this includes a capstone short thesis film or video directed by each student in the 4th year. Students are free to develop work in fiction, nonfiction, experimental or hybrid modes. Seniors are eligible to participate in a screening of thesis films taking place in May of each year, with approximately 50% showing at the local arthouse cinema, BAM Rose Cinemas at Brooklyn Academy of Music.
